Citation Graphs

Department Citations Overview

The following are a series of graphs that provide an overview about citation rates from research performed by the Department. They are derived from Google Scholar, and as a result, do not include members of the department who do not have Google Scholar profiles. Ids were found by manually searching Google Scholar against current faculty listed on the Department's Website. The following faculty members do not have profiles on Google Scholar: Desmond Jagmohan, Daniel Lee, Kinch Hoekstra, Terri Bimes, Steven Vogel, Jonah Levy, Martha Wilfahrt, and Pradeep K. Chhibber.

Publications drawn from Google Scholar are further processed to remove duplicates, working papers, conference papers, and other work that has not been formally published. Google Scholar "uses automated software, known as 'robots' or"crawlers", to fetch your files for inclusion in the search results. It operates similarly to regular Google search" (Google Scholar n.d).

Recent Research

Citations accumulate over time. To limit this possibility, we can look at all publications and citations from 2010 onwards. The department's work over the last decade is well cited.

Faculty Research Published 2010–2021 is well cited
Research includes articles, books, and book chapters

Note that the previous graph is ordered by top citations instead of years. We can plot the same information keeping the years in order.

Field Defining Work.

Measuring the contributions of research can be challenging. To create a baseline, we looked at all work that received at least 200 citations.

Faculty Publications with at least 200 citations
Research includes articles, books, and book chapters
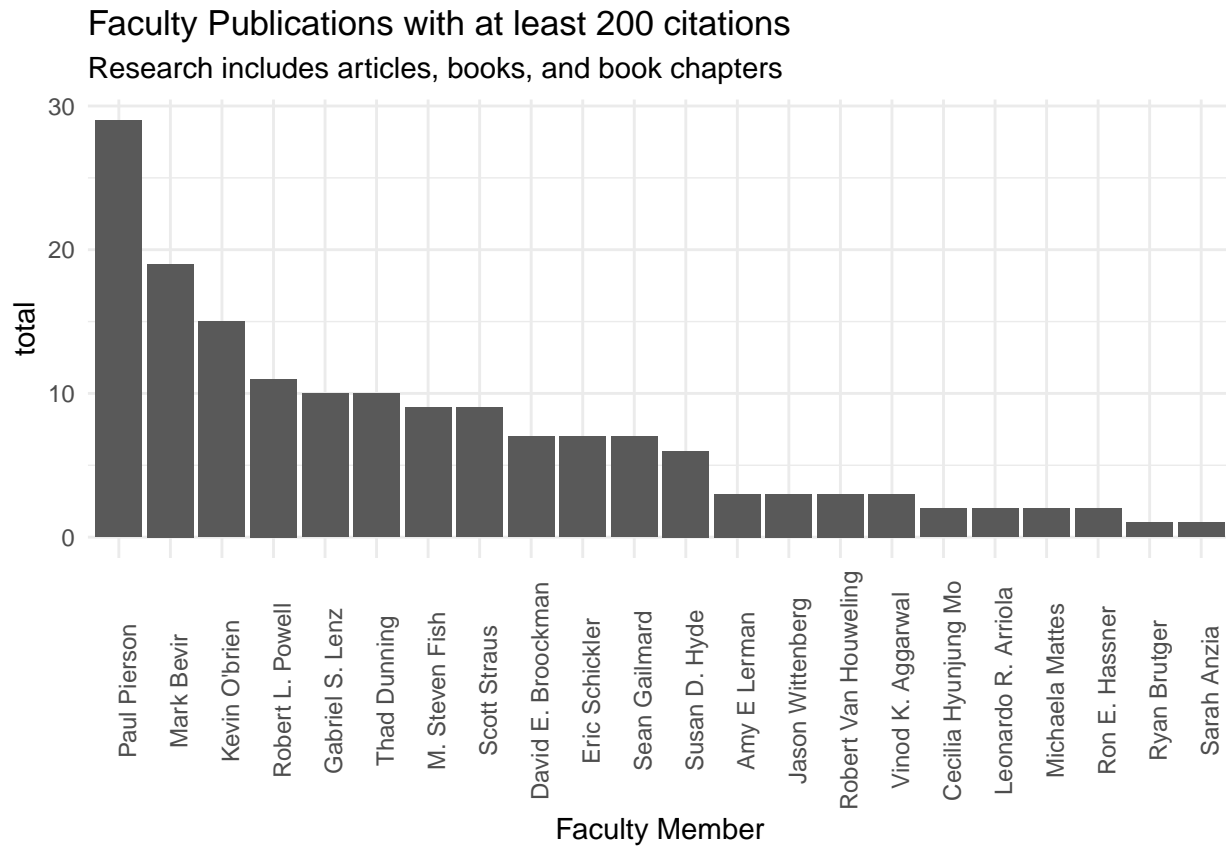

Similarly we can look at the rate at which faculty publish work that is heavily cited. A simplified "hit rate" considers the percentage of publications that have at least 200 citations among faculty members with at least ten publications.
